

Contributor Bios

- Nathanael Blake is a postdoctoral fellow at the Ethics and Public Policy Center.
- Gene Callahan has a PhD in political theory from Cardiff University and a Master's in the philosophy of the social sciences from the LSE. He is the author of Economics for Real People, Oakeshott on Rome and America, and co-editor of Tradition v. Rationalism and Critics of Enlightenment Rationalism. He teaches at New York University.
- Tyler Chamberlain lectures in political science at numerous universities including Simon Fraser University and the University of the Fraser Valley, teaching courses in political theory, international relations and Canadian politics. His primary research interests are early modern political theory and Canadian political thought. He earned his Ph.D in Political Science from Carleton University in 2018.
- W. J. Coats is Professor of Government at Connecticut College where he teaches courses in the history of Western political theory, ancient, medieval and modern. He is published widely in the field of political theory, especially with regard to the work of the 20th century, English philosophic essayist, Michael Oakeshott.
- Nathan Cockram is finishing a PhD in philosophy at UBC in Vancouver, Canada. While his dissertation is in epistemology, he has a strong interest in political philosophy, and in particular, Oakeshott, Hobbes and modus vivendi liberalism.
- Jason Ferrell currently teaches political theory at Concordia University, having also taught McGill University and Mount Allison University. His research interests include the thought of Isaiah Berlin, value pluralism, and distributive justice. His articles have appeared in Political Theory, Contemporary Political Theory, and the Critical Review of International Social and Political Philosophy. He has also authored a "Glossary of Names" for the second edition of Isaiah Berlin's Russian Thinkers.
- Emily B. Finley holds a PhD in Politics from The Catholic University of America and is currently a John and Daria Barry Postdoctoral Fellow in the department of Political Science at Princeton University. Her primary research interests include the history of political thought, political ideology, epistemology, and the imagination and politics. She is the managing editor of Humanitas, an academic journal of politics and culture published by The Center for the Study of Statesmanship.
- Justin D. Garrison is an associate professor of political science at Roanoke College in Salem, Virginia. He is a political theorist who researches the relationship between politics and the imagination. He is the author of journal articles, book chapters, and the book An Empire of Ideals: The Chimeric Imagination of Ronald Reagan. He is also co-editor of the book The Historical Mind: Humanistic Renewal in a Post-Constitutional Age.
- Ferenc Hörcher is research professor in political philosophy at the Research Institute of Politics and Government of the University of Public Service in Budapest, and senior fellow at the Institute of Philosophy of the Research Centre for Humanities, also in Budapest. His last two major publications are: The Political Philosophy of the City. From Polis through City-State to Megalopolis? (2021) and A Political Philosophy of Conservatism. Prudence, Moderation and Tradition (2020) He is preparing a volume on Roger Scruton's thought on art and politics.

- Charles W. Lowney II is an Assistant Professor of Philosophy at Hollins University, Roanoke, Virginia, USA. He received his masters in philosophy at Boston College, where he studied Continental Philosophy, and his doctorate at Boston University, where he studied Analytic Philosophy. He is interested in applying the concepts of emergentism and tacit knowing to ethics, society, and religion, and has done so in articles such as "Authenticity and the Reconciliation of Modernity" (2009), "From Science to Morality" (2009), "Morality: Emergentist Ethics" (2010), "From Morality to Spirituality" (2010), and in a chapter, "Four Ways of Understanding Mysticism" in Mysticism and Silence (forthcoming, Palgrave Macmillan, Laura Weed, ed.). Lowney is also the editor of Charles Taylor, Michael Polanyi and the Critique of Modernity: Pluralist and Emergentist Directions (2017).
- Kenneth B. McIntyre is Professor of Political Science at Sam Houston State University. He is the author of Nomocratic Pluralism: Plural Values, Negative Liberty, and the Rule of Law; The Limits of Political Theory: Michael Oakeshott on Civil Association, Herbert Butterfield: History, Providence, and Skeptical Politics; the co-editor of Critics of Enlightenment Rationalism; and has also written essays on the philosophy of history, ordinary language philosophy, American constitutionalism, and practical reason.
- Ryan Alexander McKinnell is an Assistant Professor of Political Science at St. Francis Xavier University. He studied political philosophy at Carleton University, where he earned a PhD in Political Science. He has also taught Carleton University, Concordia University, and Memorial University of Newfoundland. He has published on Ancient and Renaissance Political Thought.
- Lucie Miryektá completed her PhD in Political Theory at the Catholic University of America. Her research focuses on Max Weber, Communism and the intersection of culture and politics. She is currently working on a textbook to help American college students understand the theory and practice of Communism.
- Aylin Özman is a Professor of Political Science and International Relations at TED University in Ankara. Her areas of research include political theory, history of political and social thought, Turkish politics and gender. She is the author of various articles in Journal of Language and Politics, Social and Legal Studies, Journal of Third World Studies, Turkish Studies, and Contemporary Politics.
- Gülşen Seven is an Assistant Professor of Political Science and International Relations at TED University, where she teaches history of political thought and contemporary political theory. She holds a PhD in Political Science and Public Administration from Bilkent University. Her research interests include realism and moralism in political theory, the concept of political judgement and the relationship between political theory and political practice.

- Luke C. Sheahan is Assistant Professor of Political Science at Duquesne University and a Non-Resident Scholar at the Program for Research on Religion and Urban Civil Society (PRRUCS) at the University of Pennsylvania. He researches the intersection of First Amendment rights and political theory. Sheahan is author of Why Associations Matter: The Case for First Amendment Pluralism (2020) and he is preparing and edited volume titled Comparative International Approaches to Free Speech and Open Inquiry (2022).
- Travis D. Smith is Associate Professor of Political Science at Concordia University in Montreal. he has published on Thomas Hobbes and Francis Bacon, and is the author of Superhero Ethics (Templeton, 2018) and co-editor (with Marlene K. Sokolon) of Flattering the Demos (Lexington, 2018).
- Daniel John Sportiello is an associate professor of philosophy at the University of Mary in North Dakota. In addition to publishing several papers and book reviews, he contributed a chapter on Eric Voegelin to Tradition v. Rationalism and another on Ludwig Wittgenstein to Critics of Enlightenment Rationalism. In his research, he's especially interested in the ways in which ethics intersects with other subfields of philosophy.
- Sarah J. Wilford researches and teaches political philosophy and history of political thought at the Universidad de los Andes, and is a researcher at SIGNOS, Universidad de los Andes in Santiago, Chile. She has taught in the Political Economy and Philosophy departments of King's College London. She has also taught at Sciences Po: Menton, Le Campus Moyen-Orient Méditerranée. Her doctoral research (PhD, King's College London) was on the political thought of Alexis de Tocqueville regarding family, women, and democratic conditions. Her other research interests include the relationship between religion and liberty in the history of political thought, womanhood during the nineteenth century, and the use of historical thinkers in modern political theory and political science.
- Robert Wyllie is an assistant professor of political science and the director of the Political Economy program at Ashland University. His research focuses on changing conceptions of envy and inequality in the history of political philosophy, especially in the work of Benedict Spinoza and its reception. His recent work has appeared in Constellations, Perspectives on Political Science, Polis, and other scholarly journals.